PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE 88th CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION

Vol. 109

WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1963

No. 10

House of Representatives

The House was not in session today. Its next meeting will be held on Thursday, January 24, 1963, at 12 o'clock noon.

Senate

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 23, 1963

(Legislative day of Tuesday, January 15, 1963)

The Senate met at 12 o'clock meridian, on the expiration of the recess, and was called to order by the Vice President.

The Chaplain, Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, D.D., offered the following prayer:

Eternal God, Father of all mercies, whose faithfulness abides in spite of all our fickleness, whose forgiveness outlasts all our transgressions, take from our minds which at best see but as in a glass darkly, the delusions which so often color our fallible judgments and control our partisan verdicts. Keep us from mistaking one ray of light for the total effulgence of the sun.

Arm our spirits in this forum of liberty to guard well the principles which are the very warp and woof of the Republic's life. Give us to see, with a solemnity that awes our spirits, that if as a people we come to value anything more than freedom under God, we will lose our birthright, and that if it is comfort or luxuries, security, or money that a nation, in practice values most, in the long run as it gains that material world it will lose its soul.

We ask it in the Redeemer's name. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

On request of Mr. MANSFIELD, and by unanimous consent, the reading of the Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday, January 22, 1963, was dispensed with.

CLEAN AIR ACT OF 1963

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, I introduce for appropriate reference, a bill to accelerate, extend, and strengthen the Federal air pollution control program. I ask unanimous consent that this bill be permitted to lay on the desk for 10 days so that any of my colleagues who wish to may join on the bill.

The VICE PRESIDENT. The bill will be received and appropriately referred; and, without objection, the bill will lie on the desk as requested by the Senator from Connecticut.

The bill (S. 432) to accelerate, extend, and strengthen the Federal air pollution control program, introduced by Mr. RIBICOFF, was received, read twice by its title, and referred to the Committee on Public Works.

Mr. RIBICOFF. Mr. President, during my term as Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare I realized how serious was the entire problem of air pollution. The air we breathe is being poisoned. We are not doing enough about it. And the situation is getting worse as our population and our productivity increase.

If a sensible man were standing in a room and someone were pumping filthy waste matter into the air, he would take action. He would not stay in the room—he would not let his wife or child or even his dog stay in it. Or, if he had to stay, he would open the windows and clear the air.

But millions of sensible men and women and children are trapped in our growing cities today. They cannot leave, and fresh air is often miles from their windows. So they are forced to breathe polluted air, and they usually do not know they are doing so. The damage caused by this air to our lands and crops, to our livestock and vegetables, and to our very health and lives—this damage cannot be measured.

We have an air pollution program now, of course. But it is basically a research program. Early last year I recommended to the President that he convene a National Conference on Air Pollution. This Conference met in Washington in December 1962. The facts are all in. Now is the time for action. And the necessary action must be taken by Congress.

Let me detail the problem a bit further.

As a nation we have experienced over the past 20 years a continuing concentration of population and economic activity in metropolitan areas. Nearly two-thirds of the entire population of the United States, according to the 1960 census, lives within metropolitan areas. The
